BIOGRAPHY

Micah Fink is an award-winning filmmaker exploring the intersections of science, public health, human rights, international affairs and the environment.

His feature documentary projects include DROP TO ZERO (2018) which tells the story of the global effort to eradicate polio; BEYOND BORDERS: Undocumented Mexican Americans (2016), which aired on PBS; THE ABOMINABLE CRIME (2013) which also aired on PBS and screened at dozens of festivals around the world, winning an Amnesty International Human Rights Award and four best documentary awards; and MANN v. FORD (2011), which can be seen on HBO and tells the story of a Native American community living on a toxic waste dump and their legal battle against the Ford Motor Company.

Micah learned the ropes of documentary production as an associate producer/researcher on five investigative films for Frontline and the Emmy nominated series Frontier House Series for PBS. He was a field producer for ABC News Dupont Award winning series HOPKINS 24/7, and then produced AIDS Warriors, about HIV/AIDS and the Angolan military for the PBS international affairs series Wide Angle. He also produced investigative films about the Japanese Military, Muslim Women wearing the veil in France and the spread of the Avian Flu virus in Vietnam for PBS Wide Angle, and films for CNN, National Geographic Explorer, National Geographic Wild, and The Teaching Channel. He worked with Al Gore's Climate Reality Project for four years, serving as co-executive producer in 2015 and 2016 and the World Science Festival in 2019 and 2020.

His work has been recognized with three Emmy nominations, two Cine Golden Eagle Awards, a Silver Screen award, an International Film and Video Award, Silver Telly Award, a Japan Society Fellowship, and a Kaiser Media Health Fellowship. He holds a MS in Journalism from Columbia University and a BA in Comparative Literature from Cornell University. He is currently on the faculty at the Graduate Program in Social Documentary at the School for Visual Arts in NYC.
